Park board stalls on Laguna Grande

The Monterey Peninsula Regional Parks District board of directors bounced back to the City of Seaside last week a proposal that the district purchase 24.6 acres in the Laguna Grande area for a regional park.

Directors agreed, in effect, that they didn't much like the two appraisals of the land parcels involved, and asked the city of Seaside whether the appraisals were compatible with actual potential land uses, or whether they were unrealistically high.

The estimates for the property in question, most of which belongs to Phil Calabrese of Sand City, were $681,000 from one appraiser, and $725,000 from the second. The first appraisal gave a worth of $152,000 for two parcels in the area which the City of Seaside intends to purchase as its share of the project; the second appraiser tagged those two parcels at $110,000.

Gary Tate, manager of the district, indicated that Calabrese had offered to sell his land holdings in the proposed park site to the parks district for $710,000.

The parks district can spend up to $180,000 in state park bond act funds for its acquisition, with the remaining amount coming from general fund sources from the parks district budget. The state park bond act funds already have been committed by the district board toward acquisition of Laguna Grande lands.

"Seaside has been involved with the Laguna Grande area since 1943," said Seaside City Planning Director William Burris. "In 1963 the recreation department approached the state recreation department on Laguna Grande; because of idiosyncracies in the law, the lakes couldn't be part of the city's redevelopment project."

Burris explained that the city had requested, and had been denied, an exemption from the Coastal Commission on the Laguna Grande project, but subsequently a use permit was approved for the project. The city's plan for the area include commercial, business, and open space-recreational uses. The Coastal Commission required the city to place one-third of the area formerly occupied by auto wrecking yards as open space, Burris said.

Dick Garrod, Monterey city planning director, explained to the parks district board that Laguna Grande lake rests on the border between Monterey and Seaside, and that the south side of the lake originally was the northern terminus of the Monterey city line.

"We've purchased about one acre in the area," Garrod said, "and we hope to be able to buy other pieces in the future. Monterey has proposed to purchase a total of 4.59 acres, bringing the whole edge of the lake on this side into the project."

"We've used general fund money to purchase this property, not federal funds. For 13 years, we were dreaming that someone would be in the position to acquire the land. We hope tonight's the night that this happens. Our council had given up the hope over the years that something could be done about this to put it into park use."

Seaside Parks and Recreation Director Cleve Williams urged the parks district board to acquire the lands.

"I know of no other time in my experiences in government that three agencies have gotten together to do something for the people of the community," Williams said.

But board member Richard Little questioned the amount of both appraisals of the land, and also the discrepancy between their figures.

"The two estimates are 2.4 acres off in what they figure the usablespace to be," Little said. "This points up the need for some rational explanation of the differences, and possibly a third estimate. I'm certain this land ought to be put into open space, but this does not allow us to do it."

Director Sean Flavin urged the board not to delay acquisition of the property.

"I agree with Dick Little that the price is most favorable to the property owner," Flavin said. "But I think a public body should either accept or abandon a project as too expensive. I have serious reservations about whether you can just zone a person's property as open space and tell them it can't be developed."

"Laguna Grande is a vital and important project to the community," Flavin said. "I proposed we go ahead with what we have."

And board member John Sigourney also questioned the amount of the appraisals.

"I'm not happy with the discrepancy in the appraisals," Sigourney said. "It's difficult to deal with a seller as a broker. We are not dealing directly with Mr. Calabrese. And the question of gifts should have had some relevance by this time."

District legal counsel Leon Panetta answered a question on land condemnation proceedings by informing the board that in any such action, the board would be more or less bound to offer land owners prices consistent with those given by qualified appraisers.

"I don't think it's crucial that we have direct discussions with Mr. Calabrese," parks district manager Gary Tate interjected. "When you're dealing with a public agency, there's no wheeling and dealing."

A motion by Flavin that the board "agree in principle" to the acquisition of the 24.6 acres of land, with the condition that the terms of the final agreement be subject to the approval of the parks board, was defeated 3-2.

Board member Richard Little moved that the board "agree in principle" to acquire the 24.6 acre parcel, subjected to several conditions:

-The city of Seaside accept the appraisals presented as fair estimates of the worth of the land, based on the actual possible use of the land.

-A final agreement be worked out on the final terms of the sale and the purchase price for the property.

-A joint powers agreement between the cities of Seaside, Monterey and the parks district be worked out for maintenance of the lake and park areas.

The board approved the motion, over the disagreement of Flavin.

"This board has to face up to the issues of whether we accept the appraisals or don't," Flavin said. "By this action, we're just ducking the issue. The City of Seaside's appraisal is only on two parcels; they have no reason to do this. It wouldn't be proper for us to ask that they approve it...it's not their money."

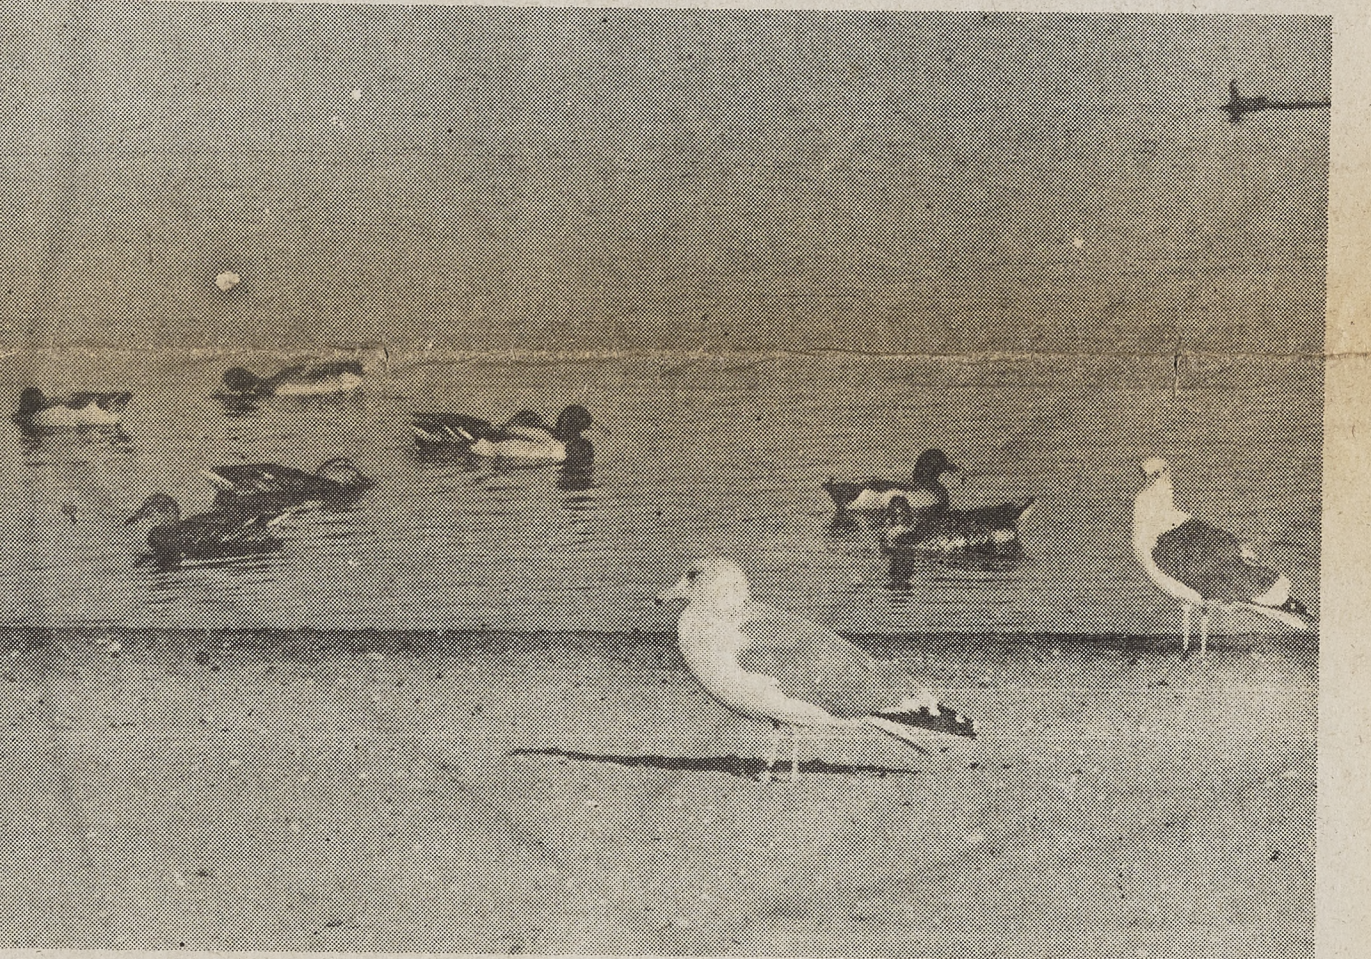

"We are dealing through the City of Seaside with the owner," Little commented. "We've got the tail wagging the dog!"

Linda Lee Bassett, chairman of the board, said: "We are vitally interested in the project and want to proceed. There are just some unknowns."

The matter was scheduled for the consideration of the Seaside City Council at its next regular meeting, at 5 p.m., Oct. 2.

Poyner to seek nomination for senate

"Just like every taxpayer government must do more with less," Monterey County Supervisor Roger Poyner declared last week in announcing that he will seek the Democratic nomination for the 17th State Senatorial District seat. "Our double economic whammy of recession and inflation demands that government find better not bigger solutions to problems."

"I want to serve the people where I can be the most effective for them," Poyner said. "The people are demanding property tax reform, health care at affordable prices, and resolution of other problems that can only be done in Sacramento."

Having served as Monterey's assistant City manager and as Monterey County Supervisor, Poyner believes he is qualified and experienced to get things done in Sacramento. "Just as I've been able to get things done that needed doing in Monterey County," said Poyner.

Poyner, a third generation Californian, is serving as chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. He is a Monterey attorney with the firm of Meheen and Poyner.

"My first priority is to a total revision of our property tax system. Band-aid legislation must give way to amending the state constitution. The unlimited power of the assessor to 'catch up' on assessments in any one year by doubling or tripling them to achieve the fair market value must be curtailed. Those on limited incomes, including the elderly and handicapped, must not be taxed out of their homes. Schools and welfare should get off the property tax bill. Banks, insurance companies, and corporations should have to pay their equal share of taxes and not be protected by the two-thirds vote requirement in the legislature," Poyner said.

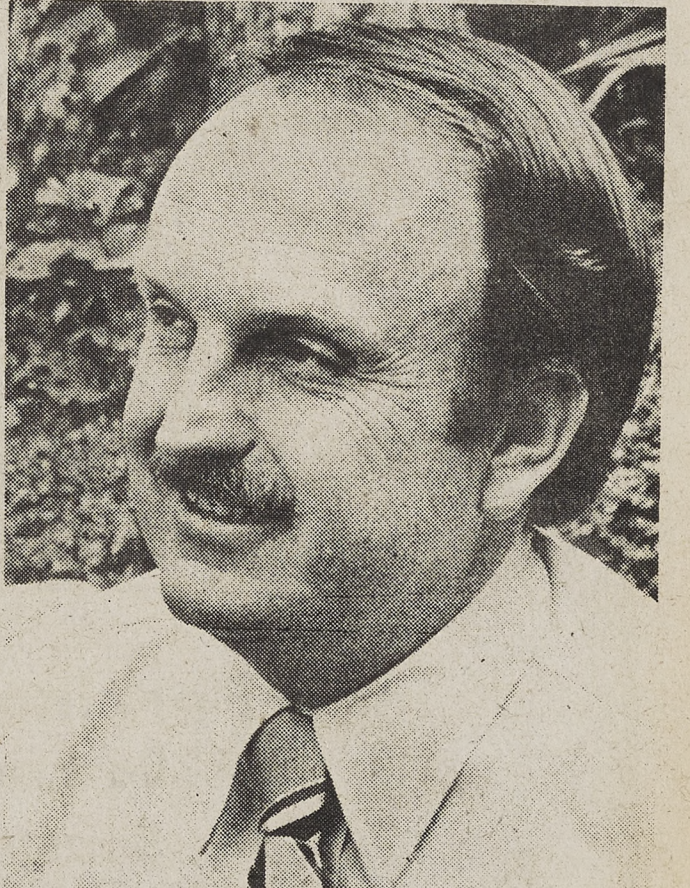

Poyner has definite opinions about the use and misuse of California's coast. He believes that the Coastal Commission, created by Prop. 20, has developed a good set of guidelines for the general plan along the coast, but the cities and counties should be charged with the implementation of the plan. Poyner said any public acquisition of coastal properties must be borne by the entire state, not just those who live on the coast.

"I am not for the continuation of the local commission or the present system," he said, "but I do see a role for the State Commission to focus on areas of critical state concern and to resolve any conflicts between the state and local planning."

"Higher and higher doctor's fees to all of us appear to be the inevitable result of new medical malpractice legislation. Good health care is too vital to the public interest to be priced as a luxury item. Our experience with Workers Compensation shows that malpractice claims could be handled in a similar manner."

Seaside's maturity

(Editorial)

Seaside will be 21 years old on Oct. 13. On that date, it will have been 21 years since Oct. 13, 1954 when the town was incorporated with nothing more than a mess of sand dunes, jack rabbits, and hope.

The road to maturity hasn't been paved with silk cushions. Seaside has weathered stormy political seasons, difficult periods during redevelopment when families had to be relocated and whole blocks torn up and rebuilt, and a perennial status as a second-class city on the Monterey Peninsula.

To say that all that has changed is to understate the situation considerably.

Seaside has come from far behind, in terms of its development and in relation to some of the older cities of the Peninsula, to a position of dynamic viability and certain leadership.

Seaside now has one of the finest libraries in this country. Our city hall, designed in accord with attractive and modern architectural styles and standards, is far and away the best equipped and most useful on the Peninsula.

The economic base has shifted dramatically during these 21 years from the tarpaper shack area, when lots were given away as promotional bonuses, to the present, when most of the major auto dealerships of the Peninsula have found a home in the Gateway Project.

Seaside is now in the process of getting a new and better library, as well as a new county health and welfare building where once stood, at Broadway and Noche Buena, what was fondly referred to by oldtimers as "The Pit."

The passage from childhood into adolescence is always a painful transition; the growth into a full and useful adulthood is the reward for having had the tenacity and character to survive. And that's just the sort of reward Seaside is now in a position to reap.

Seaside is on the threshold of a rich and productive maturity, and its ability to take advantage of this is in the hands of all who live and work here. The course of the future of Seaside will be determined more than by new buildings or a profusion of new businesses, by the quality of concern demonstrated for the city.

The community is simple too large (about 40,000 people) not to think of itself as a community of interests, of mutual need and of harmony within all its diverse elements. That this concept of community diversity within harmony has already taken root is evident in the youth and their easy tolerance for, and enjoyment of, each other's different backgrounds.

The future of Seaside rests with those who care about it. The real question of the next 21 years of Seaside history will be decided by those who care enough to become involved, and who can no longer accept the notion that Seaside is a nuisance appendage to any other city or governmental body.

Because Seaside has had to go its own way, chart its own destiny, and face many of its problems on its own, the city has grown stronger and more able confidently to face the future. Maintaining that strength and independence is now in the hands of those who care about the future.

United Fund committees appointed

Don Southard, chairman of the 1975-76 Monterey Peninsula United Fund campaign, announced the name of the five committee heads who will help him conduct this year's drive for donations.

The Advance Gifts Chairman is Mark Thomas, the peninsula restaurateur and former hotel owner who has had an extensive career in civic involvement. Historically, this committee has collected a major portion of the total donation: in 1974 this amount was $85,900 of the record $260,137 figure.

Ed Fisher, the assistant vice president and manager of Security Savings and Loan in Seaside, will serve as chairman of the Business Division.

Fisher has been a member of the local UF Board for the last four years, and was in charge of Seaside business donations during the 1974 campaign.

Dedicated to community service, he also is a board member of the peninsula American Red Cross chapter, Celebrity Golf, Planned Parenthood, and the Seaside Chamber of Commerce.

The general manager of Monterey's new Conference Center, George Forbes, will act as chairman of the Corporate-Personnel Division. Forbes, formerly connected with the Hyatt House chain, has had prior experience in United Way campaigns in other parts of the United States, though this is his first position with the Monterey Peninsula organization.

Mrs. Toni Glaser, the wife of UF President James C. Glaser, Jr., will head the Professional Division. Mrs. Glaser has already contributed greatly to this year's UF drive for funds, having served with her husband on the Fund committee that sponsored the highly-successful 1975 Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance. She also worked on the committee during the 1974 Concours.

The fifth member of this team is Monterey auto dealer Arnold Green, who served as campaign chairman for the 1973-74 drive. Green, a four-year UF Board member and past president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, is the 1975 Residential Division chairman.

"I am delighted that these civic leaders have come forward to volunteer their time and expertise to the campaign. With such an organization, I feel confident that we will surpass the 1974-75 record donation," Southard said.

The Monterey Peninsula United Fund drive will financially benefit 14 local, non-profit, charitable agencies, including the Alcoholism Council, Boy's Club of America, Boy Scouts-Monterey Bay Area Council, Family Service Agency.

A remembrance of things past

TWENTY YEARS AGO
From the Seaside News-Sentinel
Oct. 20, 1955

Pollock Is Sure He, Sarge, and Cota Could 'Carry On'
In a last-minute change of mind, Councilman George D. Pollock has given up his demand that Joe Cota Jr. be recalled from the city council along with Mayor Jack Oldemeyer and Councilman John E. Craige.

Pollock, in a final pre-election statement released to the News-Sentinel, says that he, Councilman "Sarge" Cunningham and Cota could "carry on" and "build the kind of city the people of Seaside want."

Although Pollock had told a meeting earlier this week that Cota "means to do the right thing," his chief reason for switching position on Cota appears to be that Oldemeyer and Craige would remain on the council until a special interim election is held in the event a majority of the council is ousted Monday.

In Pollock's words: "If you should recall three, remember the entire council will continue for some two months and Councilmen Craige and Oldemeyer would completely disrupt our police department and attempt to break up the fire district."

Craige and Cota also released final pre-election statements. Mayor Oldemeyer, out of town, could not be reached for comment.

Smart Money Boys Say Joe's Chances Are Best on Monday

The political dopesters in Seaside are having a tough time of it.

Regardless of which side they are on, they don't quite know what to make of next Monday's recall election.

On one side of the street, the pundits bravely predict the political demise of Mayor Oldemeyer and Councilman Craige. And on the other side, the opposition forecasts with equal certitude that George D. Pollock's days on the council dais are numbered.

Only in the case of one man up before the voters next week is there a modicum of agreement. Councilman Joe Cota, Jr., the "smart money" boys say, has the best chance of walking away from the election with his political skin intact.

And judging by his conduct ever since the recall ruckus began, it has been apparent that Cota himself has few worries about the people's verdict.

During the past several months, while other recall "candidates" have muddled the issues with bristling denunciations and appeals to court and grand jury, the swarthy little man at the far right of the council table had approached his political judgment day with a philosophy part fatalism, part confident serenity.

"Why raise such a fuss?" is his way of explaining why he has not participated in the feverish attempts of his colleagues to gain voter support.

Chamber Elects Officers; Opposes Recall Election

The Seaside Chamber of Commerce went on record this week as opposing the recall of any city councilmen.

The chamber's board of directors voted Tuesday night to oppose the recall of all incumbent councilmen and neither to endorse nor to condemn any of the city legislators.

The directors also discussed two prospective road-building projects—the proposed freeway through Seaside and the Canada De La Segunda road to be constructed eventually from the Salinas Highway to Carmel Valley.

The meeting also witnessed a tabulation of ballots for 15 new members of the chamber's board of directors.

Work Slow at City Hall

City employees aren't exactly standing around doing nothing these days, but everybody in city hall agrees that the current recall election has put the damper on a lot of work.

One bright light is street work. The Granite Construction Co. is expected to be sealcoating certain city streets today or tomorrow. City Administrator Gordon Howe wants residents not to park their cars on those streets during the next three or four days—the time needed to complete the work.

Sealcoating will begin in the Ord Terrace area. It's not a good idea to hang out your washing on the day these streets are paved; they'll be given a good sweeping before the sealcoating begins and that means there will be plenty of dust in the air.

(Letter)

To the editor:

For months, like many others, I have been following the progress of our new city and feel that a great deal of progress has been made. However, friction developed which has brought a great deal of unfavorable publicity for our city. In my opinion, it is mostly a clash of personalities and in most part could have been avoided.

I would ask each and every councilman this simple question: Have you done your very best? I hope that our people will work together to settle our difficulties as soon as possible and that all join together for a bigger and better Seaside.

Alliance on Aging schedules workshops

The Monterey County volunteers to visit home-bound elderly citizens. The training will take place at St. John's Chapel of Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey, Tuesdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. between Oct. 7 and Nov. 4, said Mrs. Frances Anderson, chairwoman of the alliance's friendly visitor committee.

She said area churches, service clubs and civic organizations have been invited to send volunteers to the training sessions. Anyone interested in joining the friendly visitors service is also welcome to attend, she said. Reservations can be made by calling 649-1222.

Currently, about 70 volunteers make regular visits or telephone calls to some 180 home-bound, elderly residents of the community, Mrs. Anderson said. Some of these live in their own homes while others live in convalescent hospitals or residential care facilities. In many cases the volunteer visitors provide the only contact home-bound senior citizens have with the outside world. The Alliance on Aging recently honored its volunteer visitors with a luncheon at the Rancho Canada Country Club. The training session to be held at St. John's Chapel will equip participants to join the friendly visitor services or help their own churches or organizations establish programs to take care of their own elderly members.

Information to be covered will include the purpose of such visits, dealing with confidentiality, the physical process of aging, how to talk about death, helping people with sight or hearing problems, available resource agencies, information about meals and housing for the elderly and legal aid and other programs.

GUITAR LESSONS

Beginning guitar lessons for children and adults will be offered by the Monterey Park and Recreation Department beginning this week.

The course will include 12 weekly lessons held Tuesdays at Monterey Youth Center, next to Dennis the Menace Park on Pearl Street in Monterey.

Schedules are 3:30 p.m. for children in grades four through six; 4:30 p.m. for junior high school students; 5:30 p.m. for high school students and 7 p.m. for adults. Each class will be limited to five students. Special class arrangements will be made for students who cannot attend on Tuesdays said guitar instructor, Stefani Mistretta.

Fees are $34 for Monterey residents and $38 for non-residents. Students may enroll at the Park and Recreation Department office, 546 Dutra St., Monterey.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The Santa Lucia Council of Camp Fire is conducting its annual new group organization and registration. Camp Fire program goals include individual learning and fun experiences aimed at preparing youth ages six to 18 for the future.

Camp fire uses the small group experience (normal size group is six to 10) in order to reach these goals. Active, skilled adults (in program and administrative areas) who care about young people make the organization vibrant and alive. There is opportunity for people with all kinds of abilities to be involved. Training is provided for any program and administrative volunteer who desires to become an active member of the Camp Fire family.

Flyers are being distributed in area schools. For more information or flyers, call 372-0700 or 424-5769.

VOTER REGISTRATION

Make your next visit to the Seaside office of the Department of Motor Vehicles pay off in more ways than one, urges DMV Manager Art Henoch.

"When you've got the documents you want on car registration or driver's license, stop at Window 14 and register to vote for the next election."

He said the new one-stop service for the motorist who visits the DMV office to make an address change or for any other transaction will begin this week in most all of the 147 offices of the department.

Employees who will provide the voter registration service already have been deputized and have undergone a short training course on how to fill out registration affidavits.

BELLY DANCING, GUITAR

The Monterey Park and Recreation Department announces they will be offering several new programs.

Women interested in learning how to belly dance are invited to join the belly dance class to be held every Monday from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Monterey Youth Center starting this week. Women may sign up at any time, said instructor Waunita Clar.

Beginning guitar lessons for children and adults will be offered on Tuesdays for 12 weekly lessons beginning this week at the Monterey Youth Center. Classes will be taught at 3:30 p.m., 4:30 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. Instructing the class will be Stefani Mistretta. Each class will be limited to five students. Fees are $34 for Monterey residents and $38 for non-residents.

Recreational volleyball for women is being held every Wednesday at Walter Colton Junior High School multi-purpose room from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. The volleyball program will be held every Wednesday evening and women may participate at any time.

For further information on any of these programs, please call the department office, 372-8121, ext. 281.

THE SIGNATURES of many of the faithful customers of Zoraida's are gathered on this placard demanding that the spot remain open for lunch.

Zoraida's closing protested by fans

Zoraida's Restaurant in Seaside is confronted with a dilemma. Owners Rosa and Ben Hermosillo decided several weeks ago to close the place during lunchtime and to only serve dinners, since the work load was becoming tremendous. It was more a case of a surfeit of success than anything else; the Hermosillos were ready to start taking it easy a bit after working hard for years to make their restaurant popular. So, they posted a sign inside the restaurant at 870 Broadway informing their customers of the new hours, which would include only dinner and no lunch. All was well until a few days ago when some ardent customers began to realize

Insulate. Save energy.

Take a look in your attic. Adequate insulation on the floor of an unfinished attic can cut winter heating bills up to 20 percent. And if you have air conditioning, there's more savings in summer cooling costs.

Chances are, there's not enough insulation in your attic... one third of Northern California homes have none at all.

So heat is probably escaping from your attic in large amounts. And you're paying to replace the heat. Day after day.

To stop this waste of your money—and the Nation's energy—takes only a day or two of your time and some ready-to-install insulation from your building supply dealer. Just tell him you want to insulate your attic and he'll show you what you need. You can probably finance it with your bank charge card.

Simply lay insulation blankets between those joists that cross the attic floor. That's it.

Or, if you prefer, call an "Insulation Contractor." It's wise to seek out a licensed and bonded contractor, such as a member of the Insulation Contractors Association, to do the work. Ask your dealer or contractor about EGIA certification.

Insulation plugs money leaks. Savings in energy... and heating dollars... can be realized with adequate ceiling insulation. The National Bureau of Standards and other federal agencies, recommend R-19.

To learn more about home insulation, just mail the coupon below. Do it now.

America's energy and your money are too valuable to waste.

THE HEART of the solar swimming pool heating system are the collector plates, which absorb the heat and energy of the sun in order to raise water temperature, as shown by Thor Rasmussen.

A CONVENTIONAL swimming pool, such as this one in Carmel Valley, can be heated by means of solar heating panels and appear otherwise no different from any other swimming pool.

Solar energy: the key to future heating needs?

The sun has, since the dawn of time, been a symbol of life and energy. Apollo, the Green sun god, was appropriate for a name for the American space craft, symbolizing man's quest for the infinite.

And with today's critical awareness of energy shortages and the finite resources of Mother Earth, new attention has been focused on alternative forms and sources of energy. These include atomic, thermal, and solar, among others.

But, despite the urgency of need for new sources of energy not dependent upon fossil fuels, most of these already-known sources still have a futuristic ring to them. However, a Carmel Valley company has been installing solar heating devices around Monterey County for the last year, in the first step toward what might become more broadly applied uses of the sun's energy.

Outdoor Living has installed 27 solar swimming pool heaters in Carmel Valley, Marina and Salinas, and plans to install its first home space heating system within a few months, making the use of the sun for practical heating purposes a reality.

Although there are some 150 firms specializing in solar heating systems, Outdoor Living is affiliated with FAFCO, which first introduced mass produced solar heating systems in 1972. The firm has systems operating in Florida, California, Arizona and in other states.

Thor Rasmussen, who is a one-man representative for FAFCO locally, is astonished at the sudden reception the solar systems have enjoyed, and only wishes there were more firms operating locally so the expansion of the industry could rest also on others who, like himself can visualize the potential for solar heating.

Rasmussen claims that solar energy can be harnessed to provide as much as 75 per cent of the hot water needs of the average home. Thus, with the typical utility consumer paying as much as 25 per cent of his PG&E bill for natural gas, solar energy could cut his utility costs by some 20 per cent, Rasmussen said.

The installation costs for the solar water heating system is between $300 to $600, while the equipment itself costs about $1,000. The solar heating equipment is used in conjunction with the regular heating system, so that the energy of the sun, on sunny days, can be trapped and transferred to the hot water heater where it is stored.

The solar heating system is installed, with a supplemental storage tank with a 50-gallon capacity, to give the homeowner a 90 to 100-gallon capacity. When the sun is shining, the solar heater can supply hot water needs for about three days, if there is no sun, Rasmussen said.

The basic principle of solar heating is the same for swimming pool heating, hot water heating, or space heating. Water is pumped through plates positioned to absorb the energy of the sun; the heated water is circulated back to swimming pool, hot water tank, or home to provide needed heat.

It's simple, and the energy is free. The solar heating system, even though it may seem space age (this is the space age, though, isn't it?) is as basic as a force of nature. The economics of its acceptance, Rasmussen said, are built around the long run efficiencies, which will more than pay for the initial investment.

As a matter of fact, Rasmussen said, solar heating and cooling systems have been in use in other parts of the country and world for at least 20 years. In the Philippine Islands, for example, simple solar collectors have been in use for years, and employ the water of a stream, trickled down a corrugated metal roof and collected for hot water. The water cools the roof and the house, and the sun's energy heats the water for domestic use.

And solar heating systems have been in use in Florida, as well, for some time, Rasmussen said. Now, the likelihood is that greater and broader impetus will be given the idea for a variety of reasons - environmental, economic, and energy-related.

"Because of the shortages of fossil fuels, and the increase in their costs, people will be going to solar backup systems more and more," Rasmussen predicted.

Although the initial cost of the solar home heating system is even greater, estimated at $5,000 for the equipment and another $1,000 to $1,500 for installation, Rasmussen believes the long-term pay-off will be in reduced utility bills and in increased value to the house with solar heating.

Because of requirements for positioning of the solar plates, which must be at an optimum 36-degree tilt in a southerly or south-westerly direction, the most practical use of solar space heaters is in new houses under construction, Rasmussen said.

One of the astonishing things about the solar energy collectors is their capacity not only to absorb the sun's heat, but its radiation as well, producing water temperatures very often much higher than air temperatures.

Rasmussen tested the efficiency of a solar swimming pool heating system he installed in his Carmel Valley home by running only enough water through the panels to fill them and to circulate it through the system. On a day when the air temperature rose no higher than 60 degrees, some amazing things happened.

"The water temperature went up one degree every 45 seconds, until it reached 120 degrees, and then it still got hotter," Rasmussen said.

The solar day, when the sun's energy is most efficient and can be best trapped by a solar heating system, is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with the most intense heat and energy being generated between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Rasmussen believes solar energy systems can be used practically anywhere, but their most efficient application is, of course, in those areas where there is a reasonable amount of sunshine. In terms of the Monterey Peninsula, that probably excludes most of Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach because of the fog, but includes Seaside, Monterey, Carmel Valley, and other areas, he said.

"You only need about three hours of sunlight to heat the system," Rasmussen said.

Although the collector panels used on heating systems installed by Outdoor Living are made of plastic, other materials used in their manufacture include copper (the most efficient and most costly), aluminum, rubber, fiberglass, and steel.

The heat collectors for solar systems can be installed on the roof of a house, if it faces in the proper direction, or on racks positioned to catch the sun's rays. The water is circulated through the panels by means of an electrical pump, and then either used directly for heat, or becomes heated supplementally by natural gas.

Since a reported saving of almost 50 per cent can be realized in the consumption of energy used to heat swimming pools, there is a total saving in terms of all energy consumed, which benefits everyone, even those without swimming pools, Rasmussen noted.

And the day is now being talked of when the desert area of the Southwestern United States might conceivably be lined with huge solar heating grids, which would be super-heated by means of lenses, to provide steam to drive generators, to provide electricity for an energy hungry America.

ASTRO - FUN - OLOGY

Oct. 1-Oct. 6

EXUBERANT ARIES March 21 - April 20: Everything you might wish to try will, apparently, be out in the open...no "underhanded" deeds, please - all eyes are on you even if you don't think so.

DETERMINED TAURUS April 21 - May 21: The want to please everyone in your immediate environment could lead to your confusion...the duplicity of this endeavor will confuse you more. Stop!

VERSATILE GEMINI May 22 - June 21: Lack of the feeling of "get up and go" is not your M.O. - suggest you try to sit back and just let things happen, for a change: time will be the best cure for this lack of interest, direction or whatever.

MOON CHILD June 22 - July 22: Seeming obstacles, in your way, will be lifted not without you personally being involved in them...others are not interested and fail - take the driver's seat.

REGAL LEO July 24 - Aug 23: Everything you do, at this time, will appear to be like living in a "fish bowl"...all will be seen and known - try to make it worth seeing and knowing, no secrets!

DISCRIMINATING VIRGO Aug 24 - Sept. 23: You may feel as if the entire social scene is against you...not so; your own positive and negative thoughts are tying you into a static position...cut it.

ELEGANT LIBRA Sept. 24 - Oct. 23: Signing of any papers, regarding important steps in your life should be checked for imperfect working...look them over now and not at the expense of an atty.

SENSUAL SCORPIO Oct. 24 - Nov. 22: "Up, up and away," or at least you feel that way...everything is in the right position for your advancement - make sure it is what you really want, or you'll be stuck with a monster!

EXPANSIVE SAGITTARIUS Nov. 23 - Dec. 21: Motivation, will be your "saving grace" for a time at least...opposition may appear to have you here and there but not really; you and you alone guide your ship of state...suggest you chart the course well and RIGHT ON!

ZEALOUS CAPRICORN Dec. 22 - Jan 20: Career opportunities will be approaching from a different side of your environment...meaning from out of seeming nowhere they will come, not one or two, but many opportunities to choose from.

EXTRAORDINARY AQUARIUS Jan. 21 - Feb. 19: Opposition will be allowing you the sneak preview of their plans...you are gifted with a 6, 7 & 8th sense at this time, use it well - you'll need it!

MYSTERIOUS PISCES Feb. 20 - March 21: A new love will be coming into your life; this love may be a hobby, travel...it is not always a person, if it is good; but look for an entirely new love for the future. It will take care of your personal, emotional and material needs.

Fort Ord man to ride Train

Specialist 5 Allen W. Gamber is being railroaded out of Fort Ord, however, you can't say he's steamed over the matter. In fact, he considers it an honor.

The 56th Medical Battalion medic is Fort Ord's representative on the American Freedom Train.

The Freedom Train, sponsored by donations from four private corporations, is traveling throughout the country with 12 cars of exhibits depicting American history from its colonial beginnings to the present.

Along with 25 to 30 other Army-wide representatives, SPS Gamber will be acting as host to the many visitors streaming through the train's displays.

The specialist was notified September 16 that he had been chosen from 11 other candidates to be Fort Ord's representative. After a rush to get ready, he met the train Monday in Omaha, Neb. After a two-day training and orientation period, he started his new job.

"It's a unique responsibility, just the fact of being the only one from Fort Ord there," SPS Gamber said. "I'm looking forward to the challenge of the trip."

A 10-year veteran himself, the specialist comes from a notable military background of his own. He's the grandson of Major General (ret.) E. K. Wright, a former commander of Fort Ord in the early 1950's. In addition, his father was an Air Force lieutenant colonel.

The medic will be on his new job for approximately 116 days. Representatives host the train in 60 to 90 day rotations.

"I'm looking forward to the traveling, meeting other people in other locations," SPS Gamber said.

The Freedom Train is designed to bring the Bicentennial celebration to the towns and cities of the nation. Each of the train's 12 cars spotlights a different phase of American history. Its moving walkways can accommodate as many as 1,800 visitors an hour.

Along with his fellow soldiers, SPS Gamber will act as host, escort visitors and answer questions during the tours.

The more than 700 articles on display have been lent by such institutions as the National Archives, the Smithsonian Institution, and NASA. Among the exhibits are moon rocks, a 1776 edition of John Paine's "Common Sense," the original copy of the Louisiana Purchase agreement, and George Washington's personal copy of the Constitution.

In addition, the train is being pulled by a restored Reading Railroad T-1 steam engine, "Old No. 1."

Flu prevention program offered elderly

Older people throughout Monterey County are urged to take advantage of the second annual Flu Prevention Program sponsored by the Monterey County Health Department, the Alliance on Aging, the Medical Society, health organizations and many senior citizen groups.

Last year thousands of seniors were inoculated prior to November and stayed in good health during the winter and spring flu season. Less than 12 per cent of the patients who were immunized last year experienced any of the minor side effects associated with immunization.

This year's vaccine will provide protection against the Port Chalmers, Scotland and the Hong Kong strains which are expected to be in circulation in the United States this winter. Influenza vaccine must be updated yearly as the influenza viruses undergo frequent changes in their composition.

As new types of influenza viruses appear they can spread rapidly because the population is completely susceptible. The Hong Kong variant of the Type A influenza virus reached California during the 1968-69 influenza season and caused a large number of deaths among the older population. During the 1972-73 season, this virus disappeared only to be replaced by the newer "London" strain Type A influenza.

Obituaries

GERALD DAVID BAKER

Graveside services were held Wednesday, Sept. 24, at 2 p.m. for stillborn infant Gerald D. Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Baker of Marina. Chaplain Sylvester Gillespie of Fort Ord officiated and burial was in the Lullabye Land section of Mission Memorial Park, Seaside.

In addition to his parents, he leaves his grandparents G.B. Baker Sr. of San Rafael, Inez Baker of Novato; Inaue of Terra Linda, and Alfredo Baraudan of Hawaii. He also leaves his great grandparents Juan Hufalar and Marcela C. Hufalar both of Hawaii.

Symphony Season

Monterey County Symphony's 30th season begins Sunday, Oct. 5, at Monterey Peninsula College Gym-Auditorium, Monday, Oct. 6 at Sunset Center, Carmel; and Tuesday, Oct. 7 at Madonna del Sasso Church, Salinas. All performances are at 8 p.m.

Haymo Taeuber, Music Director and Conductor, has chosen the Overture from Schubert's "Rosamunde" to open the program, with Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A. Major as the principal orchestral work.

The young American cellist, Nathaniel Rosen, is featured with the Orchestra in Dvorak's Violoncello Concerto in B. Minor. Rosen competed as the youngest of 42 cellists at the Third International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, winning a cash prize and a concert tour of the Soviet Union.

David Schneider of the San Francisco Symphony will lead the violins as concertmaster for the first two concerts of the series, and several excellent new string players were accepted after recent auditions for the orchestra.

For further information call the Symphony office at Sunset Center, 624-8511.

Peninsula Concert Association announces program

The Monterey Peninsula Concert Association announced the 1975-76 series of five concerts. The San Diego Ballet, a company of 15 starring Jillana and Thor Sutowski, with Dame Sonia Arova and Thor Sutowski as artistic directors, will appear on Sunday, Oct. 26.

Leona Mitchell, soprano, who has starred in Porgy and Bess, sung with the San Francisco Opera, the London Symphony and the Cleveland Orchestra, and who this season appears with the Strasburg Opera, will be presented on Thursday, Dec. 4. On Saturday, Jan. 31, Rico Saccani, pianist, who at 12 won the Tucson Symphony Piano Competition, and who in Europe studied with Gabby Casadesu, will present a concert.

The Laureate Woodwind

Quintet, comprised of flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon and french horn, which has appeared with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and at the Rome Festival, will play Saturday, March 6. For the final concert, the association will present Andre Balogh, violinist, who has just returned from Switzerland and Italy as soloist with the Belgian Chamber Orchestra, and who is the only American to receive the Yehudi Menuhin Scholarship, to appear on Friday, April 2.

All concerts are held at the Pacific Grove Junior High School Auditorium, at 8:15 p.m. A few memberships are available for newcomers to the area, $10 for adults and $5 for children through high school.

Jazz festival provides sounds, not too many exciting moments

By ROBERT MISKIMON

Describing the Monterey Jazz Festival after it's finished is somewhat like picking through the discarded hats and noise-makers on New Year's Day, after the guests are all at home sleeping it off, and trying to capture the night before.

Nevertheless, in the name of journalistic purity, and because jazz has for too long suffered rather than benefited, from too infrequent and too lax criticism, here is one view of the 18th Monterey Jazz Festival.

Several points need to be clarified at the outset:

-Jazz, because it emphasizes spontaneity and individual expression, is probably the most susceptible form of music to the influences of the moment, of the audience, or even of the weather. Unlike classical music, which is written and then read, jazz is an ever-boiling stew whose flavor is as much the product of the various artists performing as of any recipe.

-Practicality impels, and demands, that the format of any large concert or festival be structured and programmed in such a way as to attract the maximum box office. That's just good business sense, in the jazz world, or in any other.

-Today's "avant garde" is tomorrow's conservative, and each generation of jazz musicians regularly assault and conquer the then-known world of musical ideas and idioms, to fashion anew the artistic rules of the game.

Having first presented those premises, it is easier to point out some things about the 18th Monterey Jazz Festival that will, hopefully, be understood as the positive criticism they are intended to be.

These include the impression that this year's festival, despite moments of brilliance, even greatness, seemed to move slowly, and never quite generated the high exhilaration which is the essence of a truly memorable jazz festival. The Monterey Jazz Festival has, of course, generated these experiences; this year was the exception rather than the rule.

Some faults in programming, or in staging, or perhaps in audience involvement resulted in long periods of dead air between performances which tended, rather than to heighten audience anticipation, to deaden interest and to provoke boredom.

And, even though it probably does little good to speak of the infusion of rock music into jazz (from whence it originated), it was inescapable to conclude that the inclusion of two almost wholly rock groups on the program this year was done as much for box office as for art.

Anyway, all the whining aside, there were stunning moments.

Paul Desmond, whose career with the Dave Brubeck Quartet began more than two decades ago in his native San Francisco, appeared at Monterey and played. What else can you say about Paul Desmond than that he played? His music speaks for itself as the most expressive, polished, and laconically passionate of all today's alto players.

Desmond's "Emily" achieved a quiet intensity of lyricism, despite its early interruption by the omnipresent jetliners, roaring in and out of the Monterey Peninsula Airport. And, relaxing in the Hunt Club after his brief walk-on, Desmond remarked that he liked the feel of Monterey and would probably return.

So, that's progress. And other moments shimmer like jewels through the otherwise unexceptional festival. Betty Carter's high-energy scat singing, and her marvelously plastic voice in which one always hears reverberations from the be-bop era, also was a high point. Her appearance Sunday evening livened up that slice of the festival and seemed to stimulate those who performed afterwards.

Naturally, it wouldn't be fair to ignore the young jazz musicians who each year counterbalance any impression that jazz might be running out of steam, with their own fierce energy and dedication. The two Sunday afternoon concerts, featuring the combo and big band winners of the Fifth Annual California High School Jazz Band Competition and the California All Star High School Jazz Band, were proof that jazz is not at all dying, simply being re-shaped and propelled into the future by the youth.

Paul Desmond's comment on that point, to the effect that musically he's become an "arch conservative" who advocates and practices lyricism and the melodic aspect of jazz is instructive in this regard, since in the late 1950s his style was considered the avant garde of jazz.

Desmond is credited with saying: "It's becoming fashionable to sound bad. I suspect that the only thing that will really save jazz is the appearance of somebody who will make melodic jazz more fashionable than it seems to be right now."

Another institution in jazz, and at the Monterey Jazz Festival, Dizzy Gillespie, even failed to elicit much enthusiasm from the Sunday night crowd. His perennial "Olinga" is by now getting a bit shop-worn, despite his apparently fervid dedication to playing it at each year's festival. And for some inexplicable reason, Dizzy's clowning and showmanship didn't much live things up, either.

Whole sections of the festival seating area were empty at various stages during the shows, which leads one to the conclusion that possibly the poor state of the economy is partly responsible not only for the slackened attendance, but possibly also for the lack of enthusiasm for the music.

The Friday night "Piano Playhouse" presented John Lewis, festival music director, Marian McPartland, Bill Evans, and Patrice Rushen. Here, the problem was not with individual artists, but with the programming, since a solo piano-sans rhythm section—just doesn't hold the attention of a large jazz festival crowd as it would in the intimate setting of a night club. Marian McPartland played with verve and distinction; what a pity there was no rhythm behind her to accent her artistry!

The Meters, the rhythm and blues band imported from New Orleans to lend some impetus to the Saturday afternoon blues concert, gave forth with their Calypso-Creole sounds in profusion, but failed to resemble jazz in its purer forms. The harmonica work of Big Walter Horton and Harmonica Smith helped to infuse some genuine blues spirit into that concert, but it never got off the ground as one of the traditionally swinging, party sessions for which Monterey has become famous.

The "Jazz Vignettes" programming Saturday night presented, in name, some true jazz excitement, with the likes of Paul Desmond, John Lewis, Benny Golson, Clark Terry, Mundell Lowe, "Toots" Thielemans, Svend Asmussen, and others. Each artist, as expected, performed with distinction, but the walk-on-walk-off format seemed somehow demeaning to those with the stature of Desmond and Terry, and there wasn't enough time for the audience to really communicate with each artist.

And the conclusion of the Sunday night concert with Blood, Sweat and Tears could leave no doubt that the line between jazz and rock has become blurred; although the jazz purist will say that it's rock that's being assimilated back into jazz and the blues, whence it originated. Once all the possible permutations of form are exhausted, perhaps the jazz roots will be rediscovered and jazz will earn its rightful place as America's only indigenous music.

All this despite the obvious approval of the Sunday audience, which danced in the aisles.

With the Monterey Jazz Festival around, providing a format for both the old and new, the tried and proven artist as well as the talented beginner, there's always the evolutionary hope for the future of jazz. And there's always next year's festival.

Zoraida's closing

that their favorite lunchtime spot would be closed, unless something was done.

So, first there were threats of a picket line by customers, who wanted to force the Hermosillos to remain open for lunch. That idea was abandoned and several placards appeared in the window, proclaiming the restaurant unfair to the Workers of Seaside who want a good, inexpensive lunch.

More signs appeared, and signatures were added by those who came in for lunch, demanding that Zoraida's remain open for lunch, until the Hermosillos are now confronted with a decision on whether to stay open or close for lunch.

The only compromise appeared to be to restrict their lunchtime hours to 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., giving them some time off from their duties with tacos, enchilladas, chili relenos, and burritos before the dinner rush.

This week will be the testing period for Zoraida's: will they close, and suffer the slings and arrows of outraged customers, or will they remain open and not disap-point their fans and admirers?
(Tune in next week, for the answer.)

Agreement

Sept. 25, by the Administrators' Management Council.

Also included in the agreement are additional $60,000 in district funds to cover the increased costs of fringe benefits to each employee this year.

Total cost of the 4.3 per cent package including salary and fringe benefits increases, is $866,500. Business Manager, Mel Isenberger, said that this will be financed through a combination of incomes to the district.

The salary settlement also included a statement of five-conditions, which determine the distribution of additional federal or state monies which possibly could be received by the district prior to March 1, 1976, and would be beyond the monies already projected in the district's budget. If sufficient new income were to be available, the employees could receive a total pay raise of up to 8.12 per cent under all five of these conditions.

The agreement will be sent to the board for official approval on Oct 6, according to Superintendent James C.
Harrison.

Joseph Norton, chairman of the Certificated Employees Council, stated that the "teachers have accepted the agreement with reluctance, but we felt it was the best we could do, without changing the basic district spending policies. In view of the present economic situation, it's less increase than we had all hoped for." He said they were "pleased to have achieved some program improvement proposals in the conditional statements."

New children's books offer reading experiences for the young

By ELLEN KESTER
Ring Out! A Book of Bells
 by Jane Yolen
 Illus. Richard Cuffari
 A Carson Book
 The Seabury Press, New York

This excellent story of bells and their place in history is well researched, narrated, and illustrated. Jane Yolen, one of the top writers for children today, has turned her attention to this fascinating subject and maintains that studying bells enables a person to learn a great deal about a culture. The "sound of the bell is the sound of the world's past," and today "they ring as lustily and as happily and with as much dedication as those of generations past." She traces back to a moment when Confucius called bells "singing stones" or "pien ching," these were sixteen stones hung upon a frame. Because the stones were of different sizes, the player performed a melody. The author's chapters include the story of bells and religious events, bells and their use during war and peace, bell makers, bells and poetry and song. Her scope ranges from Italy to American and the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia. A student doing a research paper can find excellent material here. Anyone at any age can find the authentic background information which makes the bells which sing from cathedrals, college campus towers, ship's decks, and even classrooms fascinating. A thoroughly documented book, this story provides superb details such as the fact that it took 50 men to ring Tsar Kolokol (the name of this bell) in Moscow, the biggest bell in the world. This is a fine book for junior high students and older.

The Mysterious Eel by John F. Waters. Illus. by Peter Zallinger. Hastings House Pub., New York

The most startling fact in this excellent study of eels is, perhaps, that the Sargasso Sea in the Atlantic Ocean. The Anguilla eel is both a fresh water and a salt water fish. Mucus enables the eel to live out of water. There are 17 kinds of Anguilla eels found in various parts of the world. The author, a famous marine biologist, reveals that many questions still remained unanswered.

One of these concerns the existence of the adult eels after they spawn. No one knows where they go or what happens to them only the tiny the tiny eggs in the Sargasso Sea indicate that they have been there. They have been living in fresh water rivers and lakes in our country for example; they make the long migration to the mid-Atlantic, spawn, and are not seen again.

Students desiring projects for 4th, 5th, and 6th grade science classes will thoroughly enjoy this book. It will provide precise information; it is told in an interesting way; it will inspire them to research further.

Wilson's World
 by Edith and Clement Hurd
 Pub. by Harper & Row, New York

This is a delightful story of Wilson who is very busy at his easel, creating his world. Colorful illustrations and thought-provoking implications will stir the very young reader in the primary grades to think about his world. Wilson paints several worlds — mainly because each becomes too congested, mog-filled, and frantic.

The author gives a brief and simplified "history of the world;" it is all in Wilson's terms, of course. Wilson on his ladder, superimposed on his gigantic drawing of the world, will interest and stimulate young people to become more aware of their environment. The book is especially timely as we all are coping with the ecological concepts which have escaped our attention for too long.

What Do You See
 Written and Illus. by Janina Domanska
 Pub.: MacMillan Pub. Co., Inc., New York

Contemporary in design and lyrical in verse, this story for the pre-schooler provides an experience of literary enjoyment. The theme is serious: everyone tends to see narrowly, or just his/her own small environment. The frog sees a "wet world;" the fly sees a "dry world;" the bat is aware of a "dark world." It takes the lark to see a larger world. He has the perspective necessary to get up and above, his of course. Discussions with children about how and what they see, how aware they are of other people's homes and activities could well develop from this reading experience. The book demonstrate how a simple rendition can provoke deep thoughts.
